Module 10: Employability Skills

Unit 10.1: Importance of employability skills

10.1.1: Meaning of Employability Skills

There are two types of Employability Skills:

Technical skills

- Requires technical knowledge.

E.g. You need to have detailed knowledge about electrical components and wiring for successful installation.

Soft skills

- Enable you to use your technical skills well and have a successful career.

E.g.- Effective communication skills can help you to convey necessary information regarding your job at the workplace.

10.1.2: Importance of Employability Skills

Why are employability skills important?

- Help you to behave and professionally present yourself.
- Help you effectively communicate at workplaces.
- Help in building confidence and finding meaningful career paths.
- Help you work in teams.
- Digital skills help you in understanding the digital transformation that is happening around the world.
- Help in effective problem-solving and negotiation skills.

10.1.3: Importance of Self-Learning and Inculcating a Growth Mindset

Self Learning

- Method of learning without formal instructions.
- Individuals grasp the information on their own.

6 Questions to Ask – W3 H2 T1

- WHAT to learn ?
- WHY to learn
- WHEN to learn?
- HOW to learn?
- HOW fast to learn?
- How to TEST myself?

Qualities of Self-Learners

- Believe that they can learn on their own.
- Curious and inquisitive
- Accept responsibility
- Learn time management
- They have a growth mindset
- Willing to explore independently

Growth Mindset

- Involves willingness to Adapt, Change and Learn.
- It is the opposite of a fixed mindset.

GROWTH MINDSET

- I can do this
- Mistakes are normal
- I will try again
- I will work hard
- I can learn new things
- I am open to change
- I am happy to accept if I am wrong.

FIXED MINDSET

- I can't do this
- Mistakes are unacceptable
- If I fail once, I will always fail
- I cannot work hard
- I cannot learn new things
- I do not like change
- I cannot be wrong

Employability Skills are a set of many skills which we need to be successfully employed.

Therefore, you must note that technical skills are necessary, but equal importance must be given to the development of soft skills.
